FBI Stays Out Of CIA Gem Case

CPYRGHT

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is not investigating the reported theft of $19,000 in jewels from the home of a high-ranking Central Intelligence Agency official, an FBI spokesman said today.

The FBI was routinely informed of the theft report by the police, the spokesman said, but he added, "we are conducting no investigation in the absence of evidence of a violation of federal law."

Police were told on July 25 that the jewels were missing. This was the day after two CIA agents had entered the home of Hans V. Tofte, a CIA official, and removed classified documents Tofte said he had taken from the agency as "homework."
